Almost every November I find myself asking “Can you believe Thanksgiving is almost here?” It seems to surprise us every year, even though it has been on the calendar the whole time.

Maybe that is one of the gifts of November. It asks us to slow down long enough to notice.

We begin the month with All Saints Sunday, remembering the people who have gone before us—the people who taught us, loved us, encouraged us, prayed for us, and helped shape our faith. Then comes Thanksgiving, when we intentionally stop to notice the blessings that are so easy to take for granted.

In between those two Sundays, we will also spend some time talking about stewardship through our theme, Faithful. Hopeful. Loving. And perhaps stewardship begins with the same simple practice: noticing. We notice what God has entrusted to us, we notice the needs around us, and then we ask how what we have might become a blessing to someone else.

But generosity is bigger than a stewardship campaign. It is a way of living. Sometimes generosity looks like a financial gift. Sometimes it looks like an hour of our time, a meal delivered to someone who is struggling, a patient conversation, an invitation to someone who might otherwise be alone, or simply paying attention when it would be easier to hurry past.

Jesus spent a remarkable amount of his ministry noticing people others overlooked. He noticed Zacchaeus hiding in a tree, Bartimaeus calling from the roadside, a widow placing two small coins in the offering, and countless others the crowd might easily have passed by. Jesus noticed people because people mattered to him.

Maybe that can be our invitation this November.

Notice the people who have helped shape your life. Notice the blessings you usually hurry past. Notice someone who could use a little kindness. Notice what God has placed in your hands. And most of all, notice the quiet ways God is still at work—in our church, in our neighbors, in our families, and in us.

There is more grace around us than we sometimes realize.

We just have to slow down long enough to see it.

In Christ,
Pastor Singh
